Letters From Dumas Fils, Who Was the Armand Duval of the Play,

A Parisian review has a very curious article upon the story of the "Dame aux Camelias," that poor Marie Duplessis who died so sadly after a life which certainly was not exemplary, but which romance and the stage have made fa-mous. The author of the article, M. Georges Soreau, publishes letters by the younger Dumas, which leave no doubt that he introduces himself in the character of Armand Duval, the principal character in the piece in which Marie Duplessis is immortalized under the name of Margnerite Gautier. story was whispered about for a long time among theatrical people, but here are some authentic documents with which M. Soreau reveals the facts. Dumas fils not only knew Marie Duplessis, but was in love with her. He simply describes himself in the character of Armand Duyal. In presenting the piece to the public Dumas wrote:

"Marie Duplessis did not have all the taint. It is purely expetable, and is the only blood remedy guaranteed to contain no mercury, potash or other mineral substance whatever.

A Wet Country.

The railroad which with its branche connects Colombo, the capital of Cey-lon, with the interior of the island, is remarkable for the engineering skill shown in its construction and for its prosperity. It makes an ascent of 3,500 set by a succession of loops and curves, with here and there a tunnel. The chief difficulty in running the railroad is due to the way in which the rain comes down. A recent book of travel, "A Run Round the Empire," describes what the rain did to a train crawling up the At. Harrisonburg
